ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

THE 75TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE TOWN OF INDIAN HEAD, MD

• Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I would like to call to the attention of our colleagues celebrations that are underway to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the establishment of the town of Indian Head, MD. The mayor of Indian Head, Warren Bowie, along with the entire community, has planned several significant events to commemorate this propitious milestone.

One of two incorporated townships in Charles County, Indian Head's history goes back much further than its date of incorporation in 1920. The territory now known as Indian Head was given to Lord Baltimore, and then to Gen. Charles Cornwallis, as part of a land grant made by the English King in 1736. Records later reveal that Cornwallis titled the land to George Washington in 1761.

Older charts and maps dating from 1776 through 1866 indicate that Indian Head has had several names including Indian Point, Indian Headlands, and Indian Head Point. All of these names reflect the more popular tale of how the name Indian Head was bestowed upon the town. As the story is told, there was an Algonquin chief who had promised his daughter in marriage to the son of the chief of the neighboring Piscataway Tribe. Before the two children were united, the young woman met an Indian hunter who was traveling up the Potomac River from the Virginia Colony. The two immediately fell in love. The Algonquin chief, enraged at the disruption of the wedding plans, ordered the hunter to leave and never to return to the region again. The hunter vowed that he would come back for his love. His plans to return were discovered and foiled. The night he returned, he was ambushed by Algonquin warriors and beheaded. His head was placed on a spear and set in the sand as a warning to other trespassers. The very next day, the first white settlers came and discovered this monument. Hence the name Indian Head.

Indian Head was slow to populate itself, largely due to the fact that the area was mainly marshland. But in 1890 the U.S. Navy decided to move its proving ground to Indian Head, primarily because of its location between the naval shipyards in Norfolk and the Washington Navy Yard on the Anacostia. As the installation at Indian Head grew, so did the town. When it became inevitable that the United States would become deeply engaged in World War I, Indian Head was given a large appropriation to expand its facilities to produce smokeless powder. The naval powder factory, which is now the naval ordnance station, provided the stimulus for the expansion of Indian Head.
